Evolution Magazine

Here is a magazine I created, focusing on the evolution of branding.

Twitter

The Blue Bird

“Things that keep nagging you are the ones worth exploring”

- Evan Williams

Whilst Twitter is much newer than all the other brand's on this list. Nonetheless, they have built their brand with the aid of their little blue friend. This undoubtedly has thoroughly helped progress and propell them to where they are today. However, as shown the little birdy has had quite a few makeovers. Beginning in 2007; just one year after the original logo.

As you can see above, Twitter have remained more than insistent that 'larry the bird' is the perfect face for their brand. Although, throughout 2007 to 2011, many people would completely disagree. This is due to those believing Twitter needed a complete re-vamp to keep up with those in the industry. This was until 2012 happened.

Doug Bowman was tasked with re-creating the infamous blue bird for the final time in Twitter's history. This consisted of a more symetrical and circular design - made using the golden ratio; entirely from circles. Many other small changes were also made such as removing a feather from the wing. Alongside this, the app also re-branded to be consistent throughout all their services.

“I don't believe in saturation”

- Ray Kroc

From North America and the Middle East to Africa and Europe. McDonald's restaurant logo can be easily recognised by anyone from anywhere. It is no secret the branding of mcdonalds; specifically the Golden Arches had a lot to do with this. However, as shown above, McDonalds was not always paired with the golden 'M' icon.

In fact, the Golden Arches were not introduced until 20 years after the founding of the company; in 1960. Since then they have altered the design multiple times. Most notably they experimented with the idea of introducing a 'smile' into their design - this was axed just 3 years later. In 2003 this was replaced with their motto which was paired with a catchy jingle.

However, once again they rebranded. This included a new logo, new advertising material, improved stylized packaging and fresh re-vamped interior designs for the many resturants. The logo change resulted in the drop shadow and motto being removed. Alongside this they also simplified their jingle. Overall, this goes down as one of the best rebrands ever.

KFC

Discovering Colour

1952

1978

1991

1997

“Feed the poor and get rich or feed the rich and get poor”

- Colonel Sanders

This included a distorted and small - oddly placed Colonel Sanders featuring a blue hue. This was paired with off-centered text and overall made for a pretty ugly design. 6 Years later, they finally agreed and rebranded once again. This design was composed in a much cleaner way. They also maintained the blue hue however used it as a shadow colour instead.

In 2006 everyone became familiar with a 'new' face for the KFC - literally Colonel Sanders face. However this time cropped into a circle - paired with the white KFC logo. Alongside this they also developed and cleaned up the actual illustration itself. From then on, the brand has remained with this aesthetic except for experimenting with different compositions as shown on the right.

“We have the internet of everything but not the inclusion of everyone”

-Singh Banga

Then 11 years later they decide to change their name to 'MasterCard'. This is what forced the slight logo change. Obviously, the name and typography used were both changed. Alongside this they also removed their tagline. This logo lasted for almost 20 years until Mastercard decided their brand was beginning to decline as a result of their stale look.

Therefore, they rebranded again. This time introducing the infamous colour scheme we have all become used to. This change resulted in the typography changing again - it seems they struggled finding a typeface. Eventually, another 20 years later. They completely remove the text - to join the few brands whom have managed to 'leave words behind'.

5 GRAPHIC DESIGN

SOFTWARES USED IN THE INDUSTRY.

ADOBE PHOTOSHOP

Photoshop is an image manipulation software, created by Adobe. It is used throughout the entire industry for many reasons. These include editing, colour correcting and manipulating images. Most posters, billboards and graphic design is created within Adobe Photoshop. A monthly license can be purchased to gain access to the software.

ADOBE ILLUSTRATOR

Illustrator is used primarily for creating vector graphics and was developed alongside Photoshop as a companion product. Most industries use this software to create logos, graphics, illustrations, cartoons and typography (fonts) etc. Like Photoshop, Illustrator is can also be purchased through the creative cloud - license.

SUBSTANCE PAINTER

Substance Painter is a 3D Painting Software, allowing to texture, render and share. - "a unique ecosystem of tools and dedicated to materials" and is usually used to create assets. These assets are usually exported to Game Engines and other 3D software. Many popular companies use this software now such as; Activision, Microsoft, EA, Sega and many more.

MAXON CINEMA 4D

Cinema 4d is the industry standard for 3D creation. Even with competitors such as; Maya and Blender, they have remained on top. This is due to the easy interface, octane renderer and plug-in support - built within the software. Cinema 4D is owned by Maxon and can be purchased for £3,510.25.

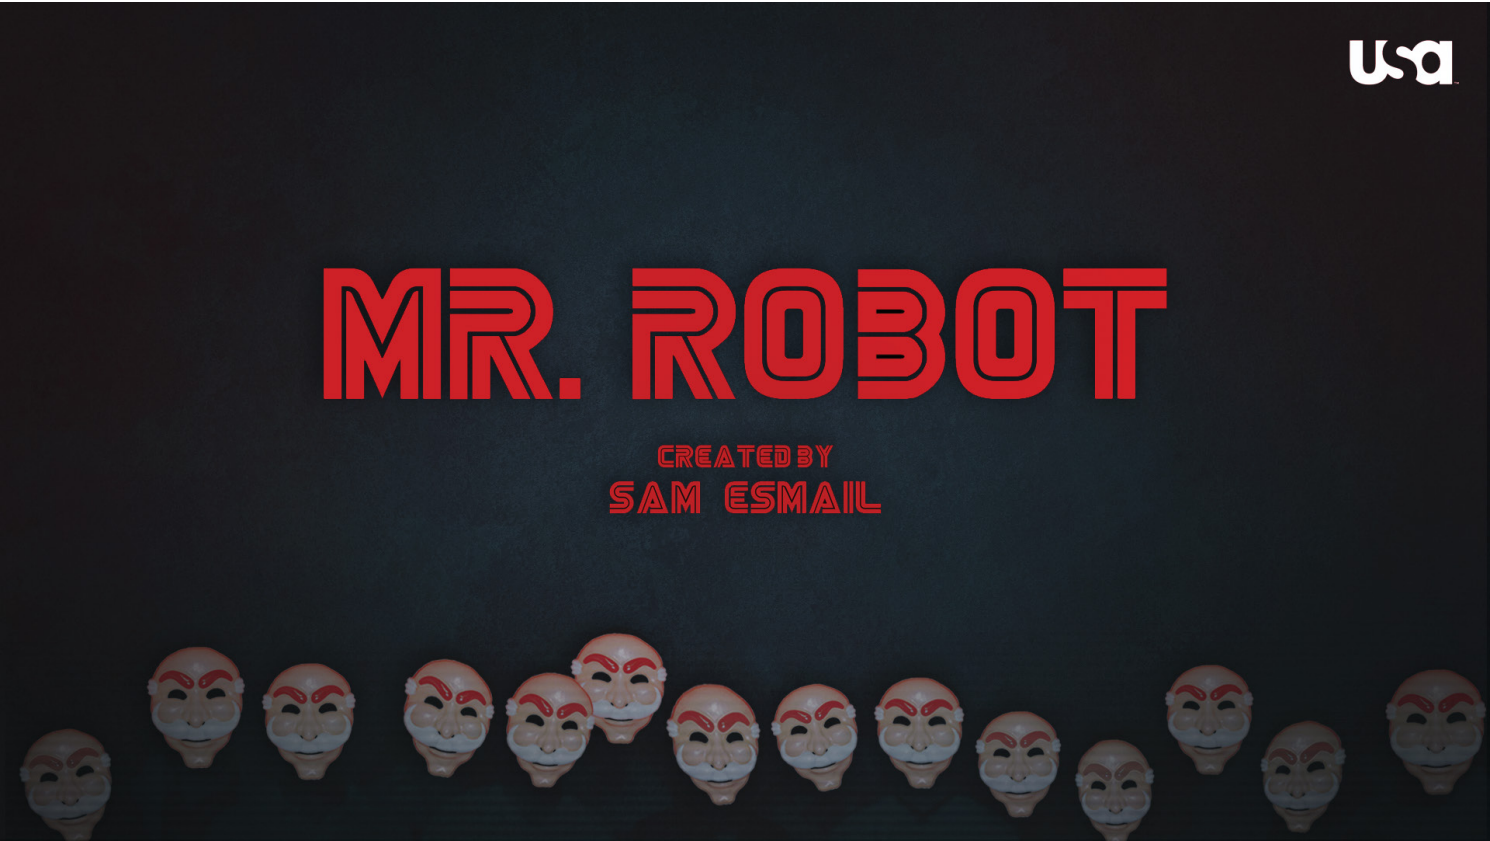

FIGMA DESIGN UI/UX

Figma is a fairly new software and is the first product to specialize in UI/UX design. Many large companies have begun using this for their app and website designs. These include; Twitter, Uber, Microsoft, Dropbox and more. Figma offer a free 30 day trial of which the product then costs £34.42 a month.

Book design project for the the book: Wonder.

A Website re-design concept for giffgaff and marketing a new 5G service.

Bio:

James Duncombe is a twenty year old employee at a video game retailer. He works from nine to five and has limited free time. He lives on his own in a flat and enjoys watching football and going to the gym. He uses his phone throughout everyday to check emails, bank online, and connect with friends and family. In his spare time, he also enjoys playing video games, watching YouTube videos and going to the cinema. He is passionate about gaming and hopes to progress in the industry.

He would rather a high speed alternative to traditional broadband, as he currently spends money on both data and broadband. He also has very limited time throughout the day where the internet use is zero - as he lives alone.

Age: 21

Gender: Male

Location: London, England

Income: £25,000

How fast is instant?

5g boasts an average speed quadruple that of its predecessor - 4g. This large improvement will see us move into the generation where the digital world catches up with the real world.

The potential

It's not just about speed. 5G will drastically change our future.

You could be gaming on packed hyperloop trains, 'snapping' at XR festivals, then go home to learn an instrument - all thanks to advanced technology and 5G connectivity.

This technology will also have extremely positive effects within numerous industries. 5G will save lives, propel humanity forward, and usher in the wave of IoT (Internet of Things) devices.

For example, your fridge, light switch, tv and even your oven could all be controlled via your phone.

You ready?

Are you ready to enter the future?
Find out more information below on how you can get set up with 5g connectivity.
